

Bracelet Making Mixer

At the beginning of the event, program participants can make beaded bracelets using the color beads that describes them best. Of the 11 attributes listed below (they can be changed), each person chooses one that defines them best. For this attribute, they use 4 beads of that color to add to their bracelet. They then choose 3 beads for the next important, 2 beads for the next important and one for every other attribute/hobby/characteristic they find important. When the bracelets are finished, people break out into groups based on category they found most important to them. Participants can then share their name, grade, TYG, pronouns, and can answer a question about the category they chose. For example, If someone chose community service, they can share what cause is most important to them and a meaningful experience that they have had. This gives participants an opportunity to meet people who they have something in common with. New members will feel less intimidated in small groups, especially when everyone has a shared interest.
